argentina once heralded as the future of capitalist progress has a long history of economic volatility in 2001 2002 a financial crisis led to its worst economic collapse precipitating a dramatic currency devaluation the largest sovereign default in world history and the flight of foreign capital protests and street blockades punctuated a moment of profound political uncertainty epitomized by the rapid succession of five presidents in four months since then argentina has fought economic fires on every front from inflation to the cost of utilities and depressed industrial output when things clearly aren't working when the constant churning of booms and busts makes life almost unlivable how does our deeply compromised order come to seem so inescapable how does critique come to seem so blunt even as crisis after crisis appears on the horizon what are the lived effects of that sense of inescapability anthropologist sarah muir offers a cogent meditation on the limits of critique at this historical moment drawing on deep experience in argentina but reflecting on a truly global condition if we feel things are being upended in a manner that is ongoing tumultuous and harmful what would we need to do and what would we need to give up to usher in a revitalized critique for today's world routine crisis is an original provocation and a challenge to think beyond the limits of exhaustion and reimagine a form of criticism for the twenty-first century
